The Washington Monument.

The Washington monument is now 340 feet high; by next November it will be 450 feet high. The work of laying the large marble blocks will begin again at the end of the present month. This year the marble comes from the Lee quarries of Massachusetts; last year it came from Baltimore county, Maryland. The work of the engineers in charge will be finished some time in the fall of 1884, when the monument will be 555 feet high. This will include a pyramid fifty-five feet high, which is precisely the width of the monument at its base. It is one of the interesting features of this monument that it tapers so gradually that when it shall have reached its great height its width at the top will be only 13 1/2 feet less than at the bottom.

Now that the column has grown so high, it is beginning to be interesting. It is noticeable that not only visitors, but the people who live in Washington, and who have watched the growth of the shaft day after day, are beginning to talk about it with respect. One no longer hears the jokes that were cracked at its expense when it was a stubby pile of stones, waiting for Col. Casey to put under it his great buttresses, which have given it its proper foundations. Then all the architects of the country, who had no special fitness for that kind of work, used to send suggestion to Rutherford B. Hayes, until the walls of Captain Davis's office were covered with designs unique enough to embellish a chapter in the history of caricature. The late Clark Mills wanted to round off the column and set it on a platform, on which he could set a group of his peculiarly constructed cart horses, mounted by some of his human effigies. Mr. Larkin Meade wanted to insert in the sides of the monument four bronze plaques representing scenes in Washington's life. General Meigs wanted to put on top a sort of campanile or lantern, which looks like a cupola with windows, being a roof supported by small columns. Greenough's statue of Washington was to be put inside this edifice. Other people wanted to make the monument look like a piece of a church or a part of a factory. Almost every one thought some kind of decoration necessary.

Fortunately, Captain Davis, who has charge of the construction, is a man of fine taste and of large learning on the subject of obelisks. He has worked on the theory that size and dignity are the essential elements of so large a structure. Therefore he objects to anything but the severest simplicity. He believes that there should be nothing but a graceful massiveness in the column; that there should certainly be no decoration that would take the attention from the size of the shaft and require close observation. So far only one piece of ornamentation has crept in; it is the vulture wings and the scorpion over the doorway, the Egyptian symbol of immortality. He would have even this replaced with a straight, plain band. The engineers hope that Congress will permit them to finish the monument with a plain pyramid. It will then be a very imposing mass; for even now, when it is more than 200 feet short of completion, it is very impressive. One sees it miles away down the Potomac, and it towers above everything in its neighborhood. Arlington Heights make a fine background for it, and it shows up against them splendidly.

The question to be settled after the column shall be completed is in regard to the finish of the approach. There is now a high earth terrace about the base. One plan is to build about this a supporting wall, making an esplanade, and guarding it with a stone balustrade. In the centre of each of the four sides is to be a staircase as beautiful as art can make it, and on the esplanade groups of statues. The objection to this is its lack of simplicity. Captain Davis wants his severe shaft to rise severely from the ground. He does not want the simple massiveness of the monument spoiled by gorgeous stairways. His idea is that the ground should fall away from the column in undulating slopes, and that the approach should be by paths to the summit. On the slope there can be trees and foliage plants.

It is thought that Captain Davis will be very lucky if he can secure Congressional assent to his simple designs. Most Congressmen like to see something carved on such a thing, even if it shall be carved badly.—New York Sun.

H. Davis will repair and put in good running-order your old sewing machine, and save you from buying a new one. Call on him. Satisfaction guaranteed.

The Bloomfield Indicator says the fruit crop in Stoddard county will be large this season, from present indications.

The Directors of the Cape Girardeau Fair have decided to hold the Fair the week following the St. Louis Fair, this year.

It is said that the demand for houses in Cape Girardeau far exceeds the supply, and preparations are being made for building more houses.

"There are 7,147 children of school age in this county, and the State gives $5,361.10 to the county for educational purposes," says the Cape Girardeau News.

"It is reported," says the Piedmont Leader, "that Brigham Young killed, not long ago at the pigeon roost, 120 birds at a single shot with his breechloader."

Peaches in this section are safe so far. In a hundred buds that we examined, but few were killed. The trees, too, are in an unusually thrifty condition.—Steelville Sentinel.

At the late annual meeting the citizens of Doniphan decided to have a six months' school, and voted upon themselves a levy of 50 cents on the $100 valuation to sustain the same.

The annual school meeting at Van Buren voted a tax of forty cents on the hundred dollars for school purposes, and ten cents on the hundred dollars for incidental purposes.

A correspondent of the Hillsboro Democrat says that Mrs. John H. Morse recently showed him some parsnips that would measure fifteen inches in circumference and fifty inches in length.

A farm of 104 acres, situated about three miles from Perryville, was sold recently for $1500, and a tract of land containing 20 acres and situated about eight miles from that place was sold for $300.

According to the Charleston Enterprise, there will not be more than one-fourth of a melon crop raised at Diehlstadt, in Mississippi county, this year. The farmers there will plant more corn and potatoes.

The Doniphan Prospect says: "From what reports we get, we do not think fruit is materially damaged. Wheat has been damaged considerably on account of continued freezing and thawing of last winter."

The Courier says there are two buildings in Cape Girardeau which show the marks of the great earthquake of 1811, and, judging from their present appearance, it thinks they will stand to the end of the present century.

General Wilson, a colored man who was in the Hillsboro jail awaiting the action of the Grand Jury, so far gained the confidence of the Sheriff as to get permission to do chores around town. He was faithful for a while, but finally skipped.

Mrs. Nancy Duval, residing with Silas French, six miles southwest of Perryville, is the oldest lady in this county by several years. On the 17th of the present month she will be just 101 years old. She was born on the 17th day of April, 1782.—Union.

Cattle and hog buyers are swarming in Oregon county. This is the result of railroad communication. The Alton Democrat says the "farmers will have no more trouble to sell their stock at a big price at home," but the editor fears they will sell out too close.

Little towns like Piedmont, Farmington, Iron, Bismarck, Marble Hill, etc., are billed for the circus which will be here on the 21st. Now, in the face of this fact, who can gainsay the claims of Fredericktown to being the hub of Southeast Missouri?—Plaindealer.

Doniphan can soon put on city airs. The railroad company is going to give us two trains per day, commencing Sunday next. The trains will make close connection with all passenger trains on the main line, which will be a great convenience to the travelling public.—Prospect.

The coming two weeks will put our city's hospitality to a severe test. During that time there will be a Temperance Convention and the District Conference of the M. E. Church, South, held here. Following these will come the meeting of the Southeast Missouri Medical Association, which occurs on the 1st of May.—Fredericktown Plaindealer.

A married couple arrived in town on Tuesday's train. There would not be anything so remarkable in such a valuable addition to our population but for the great disparity in their respective ages. Upon inquiring, we found they had been married three years, and that the husband is 63 years of age and the wife just turning her 14th year.—Doniphan News.

For the benefit of those who are so deeply interested, we would say that we, George W. Arnold, returned from our trip to Springfield, Mo., and Galena, Kansas, last Friday, and that our visit to relatives at the above places would have been an enjoyable one if it were not for the fact that we were encumbered with "the tax books and $29,000 cash, that we stole!"—Editor of Benton Record and ex-Collector of Scott county.
